Dearest Wineva,

By your letters you seem to be getting along swell and that sure makes me feel better. In fact it makes me realize what an efficient wife I really have.

Darling when this trip is over, we shouldn't have to be separated again for any period of time. I certainly hope not.

Anyway outside of drinking here at the hotel I'm being an exceptionally good boy.

Last night there was a poker game until about three this morning. A little overindulgence made this seem like a long day and I'm glad it's over.

The rest of the boys are down at the bar watching the fights over television but think I had enough last night to do me for the rest of my stay here.

Maybe I had better ask you to be my valentine right in this letter for the package I'm sending could be one day late, although I don't believe it will. The small one is naturally for Eve. Did she send any Valentines or does she understand about them yet? I sure would like to be with you both.

I miss youelinea more than I ever believed possible. It will be so nice to be with you again. I can take good care of yourself. Tell Eve daddy will be back soon and to have those hugs saved.

Have you picked a name yet?

Always you very own,
Don
